PREFACE

THE untimely death of Robert Proctor in September 1903 left incomplete his great task of indexing all the books in the British Museum from the beginning of printing to the end of the year 1520. In 1898 he had published the index of the fifteenth-century books, and in 1903, a few months before his death, the first section of Part II appeared, containing the German books only of 1501-20.

Later an attempt was made to complete the task thus begun, but it was not wholly satisfactory, and did not emerge from manuscript form. The work is now being finished, and the present volume contains the books of Italy, Switzerland, Austria, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Yugoslavia, Roumania, Greece, and Turkey. It is hoped that a second volume, comprising the rest of Europe, will be published in about a year's time.

This has been made possible by using the balance of the Proctor Memorial Fund, by the generosity of the Bibliographical Society and other sources, which must remain anonymous. The work has been carried out by Lieutenant-Colonel Isaac, already known as the author of works on English and Scottish printing types of the sixteenth century: he has in his Introduction described the few variations from Proctor's system that have seemed advisable.

The time has hardly come to estimate the character of books printed 1501-20. I fear that artistry in production and quality of paper had gone down (it is a sad thought that the first book ever printed was the best book ever printed, and that the history of printing is the history of a dégringolade!), but it seems to me that the subjects of the books change less than might have been expected. There is no departure from the Middle Ages to the Renaissance (the latter, of course, begins at very different dates in various countries), and I do not discern any great decrease in liturgical books or increase in 'popular' literature. My general conclusion is that Proctor was right (as he usually was) in considering 'early printing' more or less as a unit from the beginning to 1520, at which time the world of books was swamped by the vast publication of controversial works due to the beginning of the Reformation.

This book has no dedication, but I believe we should all like it to be associated with the name of Mr. A. W. Pollard: his, next to Proctor's, has been the greatest influence towards its achievement.

STEPHEN GASELEE.

INTRODUCTION

WHEN Sir Stephen Gaselee invited me to undertake the continuation of Proctor Part II, I asked if he would allow me to simplify the entries, and to use the modern type descriptions, first introduced into this country by Mr. Stanley Morison in his German Incunabula in the British Museum.

Proctor's numbering of types is difficult to remember, and the use of the height in millimetres of 20 lines after the name of a type family gives a rough idea of what the reader may expect to find. Proctor's own example of his other abbreviations in his preface to Part II, Germany, 'AcBX²Y;b;αΔ' necessitates too frequent reference to the preface for convenience. Consequently it was decided to omit all reference to initials, and to include only devices, and, under the heading of Compartments, all title-page frames or compartments cut either on a single piece of wood or metal, or on pieces evidently intended to form part of a single design.¹

In other respects Proctor's system is followed. Books are arranged, mainly in chronological order, under their printers; the printers are arranged chronologically under the towns, and the towns, in the same manner, under the countries. Modern research has in some cases changed the order since Proctor's day, and where this has happened the order follows the British Museum Incunable Catalogue rather than Proctor's Index. The names of countries are given in the English form and the political divisions and boundaries in accordance with the Treaty of Versailles are followed.

Books without any printer's name, if there is any evidence enabling them to be assigned to a printer, are grouped after the signed ones, and if a conjectural ascription of an anonymous book to a particular press is very doubtful the note [Dub.] is added. Books which I have been unable to assign to any known printer are placed at the end of each town, or if not assignable to any town, at the end of each country.

The names of printers who are known to have been at work in the first twenty years of the sixteenth century are placed as far as possible in their chronological order even if none of their work is represented in the British Museum Library. In such cases their names are placed in square brackets.

Publishers will always remain a difficulty in a book of this kind. In some cases they appear to have possessed types of their own and certainly compartments and initials. Where it is definitely stated in the colophon that the book was printed by a man whose activities appear to have been confined to publishing, books are placed under his press, and if the types can be assigned to any particular printer the name is added in brackets, e.g. Mazochius at Rome. In the case of a large publisher, such as Pacini at Florence, books which are printed for him, but cannot be definitely assigned to any printer, are grouped under his name for the sake of convenience, but when assignable they are placed under the printer's name.

TYPE MEASUREMENT follows Dr. McKerrow's definition in his Introduction to Bibliography, p. 306: 'To measure from any point in one line to the corresponding point in the 21st line above or below.'

DATING. If a book is not dated but contains (e.g. in a letter to the editor) a date not inconsistent with the typographical evidence, that date is used in the arrangement. It is then included in square brackets and is preceded by b. (before), n. b. (not before), a. (after), or n. a. (not after), according to the circumstances. Books which have the date of the year, but no month or day, are, as a rule, placed after those of the same year in which the fuller information is given. But this rule is not invariable, if there is a large gap in any one year, and a number of books without month date. In this case the latter are generally arranged to fill the gap. Again, if one of the books of a particular year is dated December, the books without month date are usually placed before it unless there is a large number of such books.

Where books are reprinted with the original date in the colophon, the book is placed according to the colophon, and the approximate date is given in brackets, but should the date given be in the fifteenth century, the book is placed according to its approximate date. A book such as the Aldine Gemistus '1503', printed after 1520 but bearing a date in the period, is not included. In his preface to Part II, Germany, Proctor wrote: 'Undated books are distinguished as far as possible according to their date and not as in Part I placed together in a mass after the dated books.' This system has been continued.

The real difficulty connected with the date is the question of the beginning of the year in different places. The want of accessible information on this point has induced me to assume Jan. 1 as the beginning of each year unless internal or external evidence shows particular dates to be reckoned otherwise.

In the dating of books by Aldus, who used both Jan. 1 and Easter as his start of the year, I have followed the essay on the subject by Richard Copley Christie.

SHORT TITLE. The date is followed by a short title, which is given in the briefest intelligible form, usually, in the case of official documents or books without definite title, by a descriptive periphrasis, but always, when possible, in the language of the original. Latin spelling is modernized, but books printed in the vernacular retain the original spelling.

The word printed in small capitals indicates the heading under which the book is entered in the General Catalogue. When the heading is a translation, or a word which does not enter into the title as given here, it is placed at the end of the title in square brackets. The publisher's name, or the name of the person at whose expense the production was undertaken, if any is given in the book, is also placed in square brackets.

SIZE. The size is always the form size, i.e. it is determined by the folding of the paper, the position of the watermarks, and the direction of the chain lines. The word 'agenda' is added after the size to indicate the special shape in some books of Aldus Manutius and Paganinus.

REFERENCES. References are made to Panzer's Annales Typo- graphici. The volumes in which the various towns appear are given in the lists of towns at the beginning of each country. In the type and device descriptions references are made to Proctor's Index, Part I; to the Catalogue of books printed in the fifteenth century now in the British Museum; to Dr. Haebler's M forms, drawn from his Typenrepertorium der Wiegendrucke; to Kristeller, Die italienischen Buchdrucker- und Verlegerzeichen; to Heitz, Basler Büchermarken; and occasionally to Weller, Repertorium Typographicum.

TYPES. The typographical information which follows the references is arranged to correspond with the small type at the head of each press. In some cases a book may contain the capitals only of a particular type which consists as usual of both upper and lower case. Such fact is always indicated. But some founts, almost always sets of large capitals, have no lower case and are used exclusively for headings and initials. The type measurement in these cases is the height of the individual letter and not the measurement of 20 lines. Where these capitals are used as initials only, they are placed in square brackets.

COMPARTMENTS. As stated above these follow the definition of a Compartment as given in McKerrow and Ferguson's Title-page Borders.

DEVICES. Where devices have been described in the B.M. Incunable Catalogue under a certain letter, they retain the same letter in this index, and later ones follow in alphabetical order. This explains why the first device of a printer in this index is not necessarily called A.

REMARKS. The number of copies in the B.M.C. is omitted, but vellum copies are noted. Reissues are given separate numbers. Where a firm is continued from father to son, or husband to widow, with the same types, the press is counted as one; but in cases such as Georgius and Caesar Arrivabenus, where apparently there was a two years' interval after the cessation of the press of Georgius before Caesar started with different types, separate presses are given.

Where a printer's type is described 'as' that of another, it means that the types came from the same punches, with the possible exception of an odd sort.

The books in Hebrew types have been arranged by Mr. Cyril Moss under the supervision of Mr. Jacob Leveen of the British Museum, while Mr. L. C. Wharton has been kind enough to do those in Glagolitic and Cyrillic types.

My thanks are also due to Mr. A. F. Johnson for his invaluable help and advice, to Mr. Victor Scholderer, and other members of the staff of the Department of Printed Books, and to Miss Fegan, who has prepared the index.

NOTE ON THE HEBREW BOOKS

THE Hebrew books registered in this volume come from two geographical centres, Italy, and what was formerly European Turkey. Italy is represented by the cities of Rome, Venice, Genoa, Mantua, Fano, Pesaro, and Ortona. Only two cities in European Turkey printed Hebrew books, Constantinople and Salonica.¹ Whilst the majority of the printers were Jews, there were amongst them three Christian printers, all of them from Italy. Of these the most important was the celebrated Daniel Bomberg, of Venice, the others being Facciotti de Montecchio, of Rome, and Petrus Paulus Porrus Mediolanensis at Genoa and Turin. The first two are known to have employed Jewish compositors and correctors; the last may have dispensed with Jewish assistance.

The books printed by Facciotti de Montecchio are poor both in type and execution. The types employed by Samuel Laṭif, though bold and clear, are spoilt by the excessive crowding of the page. On the other hand, while the Hebrew and Arabic types used by Porrus in his polyglot Psalter cannot compare with the best specimens of Oriental printing, its shortcomings in this respect are more than offset by the magnificent appearance of the page, which is a masterpiece of typographical arrangement, a quality which he shares with another Christian printer, Daniel Bomberg. The latter's editions of the Rabbinic Bible and the Talmud, with commentaries, are justly famous both for the excellence of the type and the arrangement of the page.

Perhaps the most remarkable figure among the early Jewish printers was Hieronymus (Gershom) Soncino. Scion of a renowned family of printers whose activities ranged over the whole of Italy, he was not content with publishing only Hebrew books. We have also Latin and Italian works from his press. Grandson of the founder of the printing house, Israel Nathan, who in 1483 set up his press in Soncino (from which the family name is derived), Gershom began printing at Brescia in 1491, going successively thence to Barco, Fano, Pesaro, Ortona, and Rimini, and migrating finally to Constantinople, where he died in 1533. For the purposes of this Index we are only concerned with three of these places, Fano, Pesaro, and Ortona. It might seem invidious to single out any one type for special praise, where all achieve such high excellence, yet one specimen, the large square character employed in the editions of the Bible, excels all others, surpassing in its beauty and monumental quality even the best examples of the Bomberg founts. (It may incidentally be pointed out that this type is quite obviously based on the manuscript copies of the Bible written in the Sephardi hand.)

A remarkable feature of the Hebrew books printed in Italy in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries is the gap of some six years, from 1497 to 1503, which separates the last Hebrew books printed by Gershom Soncino at Barco and the first Hebrew book printed by him at Fano.¹ A similar and even longer period of time, from 1493 to 1505, divides the solitary incunable printed at Constantinople from the earliest sixteenth-century books. The reasons for this cessation of printing activity are not known. Two explanations, neither wholly satisfactory, may be hazarded to account for this phenomenon: that production of Hebrew books had outstripped the limits of demand; or, alternatively, that books were actually printed in the course of these years but have completely disappeared.

Of the books printed in European Turkey the lion's share falls to Constantinople. The leading family of printers in the city was that of Ibn Naḥmiās. Other printers arose later, but they had all been connected in some capacity or other with the Ibn Naḥmiās family. Only six varieties of type were employed by these printers against double that number used by their Italian colleagues. The exquisite compartment depicting the chase, which we first find in the books of Eliezer Alantansi, as, for example, in his edition of the Bible, Ixar, c. 1486-9, and of Abudirham's Commentary on the Prayers, Lisbon, 1498, reappears in the earliest books printed by David and Samuel Ibn Naḥmiās at Constantinople. But in other respects, as, for example, in the cursive types employed, these books show no marked affinities with the incunables printed in Spain and Portugal. The earliest Constantinopolitan prints achieve a respectable standard of craftsmanship, though never quite rising to the heights attained by the Spanish, Portuguese, and Italian printers of Hebrew books.

As distinguished from Constantinople, only one printer, Judah Gedaliah, is known to have operated during this period at Salonica. Originally hailing from Lisbon, where he was employed in the press of Eliezer Toledano,² he subsequently migrated to Salonica, where he set up a press of his own in 1515. The influence of his apprenticeship in Portugal is clearly reflected in his books, notably in the cursive (Rashi) type employed, which is patterned very closely upon the incunables printed in Spain and Portugal.³

The proportion of Hebrew books printed during the years covered by this Index is small, but the measure of their importance is not to be gauged by mere numbers. Both in the beauty of their lettering and in the excellence of their decoration, the best examples of Hebrew books printed in Italy fall in no way short of the finest productions of the non-Jewish presses of the time.

² See Steinschneider, CB, col. 1189.

³ These cursive types are in their turn based upon the style of writing found in the Sephardi MSS. of the time.

Unsigned Aldine counterfeits printed in Venice

12902. n.d. Le terze rime de DANTE. 8°. Ital. 81. A copy of the 1515 Aldine edition with the preface. Ascribed by Renouard to Gregorius.

VENICE.
22. Aldus
Manutius Romanus.

The face is noticeable for the use of ligatures with m and n, and the small flat ampersand. A similar face was used by Bernardinus Venetus de Vitalibus in 1525.

12903. n.d. J. J. PONTANUS: opera. 8°. Ital. 83. Copied from the Aldine edition of 1513 or 1518. The m and n are not tied and the ampersand is slightly larger than in the Dante. A similar face was used by Gregorius de Gregorius in 1526 and with slight variants in 1522.
12904. n.d. HORATIUS FLACCUS: poemata omnia. 8°. Copied from the Aldine edition of 1519, with the preface, and annotationes Aldi. Italic 83 as in the Pontanus; Gr. 83.

Unsigned

Unsigned books printed in 102 Roman, a face which appears to have been acquired from Morgiani, are ascribed to S. di Carlo owing to his use of it in one book signed by him, CORSALI, and the unsigned THEODORO which from the use of 87 Rom. is undoubtedly his. Further the MARCUS which is printed entirely in 102 Rom. has compart. I of S. di Carlo. A similar type is found in two books of F. di Giunta's in 1504 and 1512 with the printing of which S. di Carlo may possibly have had some connexion.

4. JOHANN FROBEN, WITH JOHANN AMERBACH AND JOHANN PETRI, AND ALONE [Proctor. Press XIII].

TYPES. TEXTURA: 288 [P. 10].

ROTUNDA: 126 [Amerbach P. 13] as Ratdolt at Augsburg; 66^a heavy type with M⁸⁸; 66^b a lighter type conjugate with it; similar types were used by Petri; 91 with M⁹¹ and 99, also used by Gengenbach; 81 with M⁸⁸, as Amerbach 82^b [P. 11, B.M. fcs.]; 180 as Amerbach [B.M. fcs.]; 110 with M⁸⁸; 196 with elaborated caps., as Petri; probably the face of Amerbach 185 [P. 1, B.M. fcs.] recast; 96 a state of Amerbach 106 [P. 5, B.M. fcs.]; the s here has a long upper terminal; 132 [P. 7] as Ratdolt; 76 with M⁴⁷[?] and h with tail on line as Amerbach 76 [B.M. fcs.], caps. from 8r are sometimes mixed with it; 61 [P. 4, 62^b] with M⁴⁹.

ROMAN: 87 Qu/, Q/u, i with stroke, wide M, pointed A used also by Lamparter; derived from Amerbach 87* [P. 25, B.M. fcs.]; 110 Qu/, Q/u, i with stroke; distinguishable from Amerbach 110 [P. 23] by the A with slab serif; 76 (Partnership) Qu/, i with dot or short stroke, as Amerbach 75 [P. 24, B.M. fcs.]; Froben alone uses Q/u with tail of q level with base-line as well as the partnership Qu/; 66 Q/u, i with stroke, distinguishable from Petri by the Q being further from the u; 80 caps. only, as Petri 80; caps. 14 mm., used sometimes as initials and then placed in brackets; caps. 8 mm., used occasionally as initials; 91 Q/u, i with stroke, distinguishable from Petri's 91 by the Q/u.

ITALIC: 80 Q/u; the earliest M has vertical stems with the centre point touching the base line; later the caps. of 80 Roman were used; 87 Qu/, M with slanting stems, with the centre point coming down just above the base line; used also by Cratander.

GREEK: Two faces: (a) probably a type of Amerbach's, not used after 1513; (b) cast on several bodies.

HEBREW: Square 110; 12 mm. high in single words.

6. JOH. BERGMANN.

There is a little doubt if Bergmann continued to print after 1500. An edition of Geiler's Trostspiegel without date is assigned by Weller (259) to c. 1503; and an edition of the Narrenschiff which has Bergmann's device and motto is dated 1506 'vff die Vasenacht'; but this seems not to be a real dating.

7. NICOLAUS LAMPARTER.

TYPES. ROTUNDA: 135 for headlines; 94 with M⁸⁸; 63 with M⁴⁷; 80^a with M⁴⁷ and caps. with single stems; 80^b as 80^a but with some Schwabacher letters added.

ROMAN: 87 as Froben, derived from Amerbach 87* [P. 25, B.M. fcs.].

GREEK: A few words.

DEVICES. A. Basilisk holding two shields, the left bearing the arms of Basel, the right Lamparter's mark; pillars at sides; canopy at top. White ground. Single frame-line, 48×33 mm. Heitz 24.

B. Lion holding shield bearing printer's mark; ribbon with name NICOLAUS LAMPARTER DE BASLEA. Horizontally shaded ground. Single frame-line, 109×90 mm. As Furter [Heitz 16] with the name and mark altered.

8. PAMPHILUS GENGENBACH.

TYPES. TEXTURA: 158 with M⁶⁶ and M⁶⁹; 229 probably the same as Wenssler 229 [P. 15, B.M. fcs.].

ROTUNDA: 91, used by Froben, with M⁹¹ and M⁹⁹ and two A's; 70 a few lines in notes with M⁴⁹.

SCHWABACHER: 89 an upper Rhine type, with plain h.

ROMAN: 87 Q/u, i with dot or short stroke, double hyphen, distinguishable from Cratander by the angle of the hyphens.

DEVICES. A. Two shields at the bottom of two borders; one with the printer's mark, the other with the arms of Basel. The shields have white grounds and measure 19×17 mm. and 19×22 mm. respectively. Heitz 26.

¹ The 15 Kislēv 5276 fell on a Thursday and not on a Tuesday; in the year 5277, however, the 15 Kislēv fell on a Monday, Nov. 10, and this is probably the correct date (Nov. 10, 1516). Two explanations may be offered for this appearance of a ו' instead of a ח' in the date: (1) in the first place, the letters ו' and ח' are very much alike; and (2) the printer may have unconsciously written a ו' (=6) for the ח' (=7) because the corresponding Christian year ended with the figure 6 (1516).

² No place of imprint.

³ Assuming that Adar I was intended, this date would fall on a Saturday, a day on which Jews are forbidden to print. 5277 A.M. was a leap-year, a year, that is, in which there were two Adars.

bro de Amicitia pluribus rationibus ostendunt. Et nos hic duas ex illis ad-ducemus. Quae Prima fit haec. Solum inter hos est vera amicitia qui se amant propter se et non propter aliquod accidens. sed soli boni se habent virtute sive amant. ergo et. Ad id non probatur. Quoniam qui se mutuo amant ob utile aut iocundum: non propter se sed quia alter ab altero vel aliquod commodum vel iocundum accipit se se amant. Et ideo dimoto eo propter quod erant amici: solum tunc eorum amicitia non permanet. Bonorum vero amicitia perfecta est. Hi namque si bona mutuo volunt: quia tales sunt. et ideo propter se ipsos et non propter alium se diligunt. Permanet igitur eorum amicitia: nec facile soluitur. quoniam
